This Just In! Saturday September 16, while your editor was preparing this issue, a dedicated team of workers, led by Glen and Linda Conrad, finished the new concrete front porch at Nesika. The porch project was planned and led by Merrill Hugo (and Randy Dietrich). Glenn Conrad moved most of the cement sacks by himself to prepare for the project. The job consumed 150 sacks of premix, utilized two concrete mixers and a bunch of black plastic bags to protect the dedicated volunteers from the frequent downpours. The porch replaces the old porch, constructed from slabs cut by Jerry Reneau's Alaska mill from Douglas fir that was felled across the site. Another slab from that tree graces the fireplace mantel. The old slabs from the porch will likely be recycled into benches for Nesika. (Photo—Katriona Butler)

George Milne's report on the Federation of Western Outdoor Club Convention - 2016

"Mind changing discussion among new friends in spectacular surrounds", Friends of Discovery Park delegate Elaine L Chuang stated in an email following the FWOCC convention.

The convention was held at Islandwood Educational Learning Center on Bainbridge Island in Puget Sound. It is a beautiful multi-acre campus with several awesome buildings that housed all ages of young students for a five day experience, learning about sustainable living, conservation, and environmental priorities in the world. The program is affiliated with the University of Washington. We are extremely grateful for the opening in their schedule to accommodate our event.

Eight Trails Club of Oregon members attended the September 16th -19th event. Shelley Spalding, with Great Old Broads for Wilderness, coordinated a fabulous program focused on water issues, especially in the West.

We listened to speakers describing the impact of diverting water from Northern California to Southern California cities. We heard testimony of the problems of building several dams on tributaries to the larger rivers to store winter run off for summer use.

John Gussmann, a professional photographer and now a successful documentary film maker talked about and showed his film, "Below Still Waters", documenting the 100 year history of three dams erected on the Elwha River in Washington that displaced traditional tribal fishing and denied salmon and other fish the ability to reach their spawning grounds. Habitat that developed below the dams would not support spawning and contributed to the severe decline of salmon population. After 100 years of operation the dams were dismantled, the tribes celebrated, and the fish were immediately able to swim upstream. The restoration of the Elwha River and the valleys it flows through has proven to be extremely successful.

There was a presentation regarding the efforts to create a Douglas Fir National Monument in Southern Oregon. It is a location that has some of the best remaining old growth Douglas Fir in the United States.

Receipt of requests from member organizations concerning activities and learning of concerns in their area is a regular event at the conventions. This year, seventeen requests were considered, some modified, by attendees. All were approved to be added to the FWOC website for all the member organizations to use when needed.

The Federation of Western Outdoor Clubs is composed of 45 organizations in seven western states and upward of one hundred individual members. The Trails Club of Oregon was one of the founding members in 1932 and continues to be an active partner in FWOC.

The Trails Club attendees praised the event and Islandwood Educational Learning Center's staff for their kindness, accommodations and meals.

George Milne

FWOC President

A Double Donation:

George Milne trains Ann Steinle to scan her father's TCO slide collection, which includes a variety of outings - especially ones of the Kiddie Kampers. Ultimately, Ann is not only donating her father's collection, but also she is taking the time to scan them and then she will store the slides at her house.

We are very grateful. Since Ann was active with the original Nesika Teens group earlier in our history, instead of Waldo, we'll be looking for the young Art Stangell among those young Kampers. Ann is hoping to recruiting others from the Kiddie Kamper group to ID their friends in the slides.

(Ann also attended the September Board meeting. - Ed.)

Historian's Blog - October

Peeling back the layers of club culture, we begin to learn that our activities primarily served as vehicles to enjoy nature and develop camaraderie. Besides hiking, a club signature became outings, projects, work parties and special events allowing for a lifespan of participation for those sharing a range of skills and abilities.

A board member this last month, said that the reason they want to shut down the history office is they are being approached by hordes of members who feel we are using more than our share of club resources to preserve the club's history. Interestingly enough, this is contrary to what I am hearing from other members, who are grateful for me taking an interest and involving nearly 50 members in such a process.

One thing is for sure, healthy communication has guided the Trails Club through similar conflicts, maintaining unity and overcoming divisions. When I joined the club in the late 70s, some members wanted to sell our beloved Nesika and buy beach property. Fortunately, our own George Milne the mason contractor fell in love with our property in the Multnomah Basin and dedicated much of his life to working with club members to rebuild a lodge, one designed to last well into the future. Over the years of this extraordinary project, our family matched the total donations with in-kind ones given to offset the financial burden to the club. In a similar way; I've donated an insane amount of time to organize the club's history and to develop connections with people, organizations and institutions..

Something I learned this last weekend helps me make sense of this current situation. It seems the prefix "com" is Latin for "the exchange of burdens" of which the discussion is key to seeking out a mutual solution. After hearing about the board's burden, I am writing the membership to urge anyone who is hesitant to spend the club's money to honor the values of members past, the ones who built this club to be what we all enjoy today, to visit our club's history in Oak Grove. Admission is free and the walk into yesteryears is magical, the stories great educators of times past. Often when I work into the wee hours, I encounter those past spirits; especially the ones I promised that the rebuilding of Nesika would come to fruition. I look forward to your call for an appointment to check it out for yourself.

Sincerely,
Sylvia Milne, Historian

Empty Boots—Laura Borchers Trails Club member Laura Borchers passed away last Friday. Her sharp wit, keen intellect and indomitable spirit will be missed by all who knew her. She loved to hike and backpack and was a great friend to Nesika Lodge and to so many of us. She passed away on Friday, August 19. She is survived by her son and daughter. She was a fierce, fierce fighter We will miss you, Laura. (Photo - Cindy Lee)

Empty Boots - Charlene Petrie

Petrie, Charlene May (Ernstmeyer) 89 Feb. 22, 1927 Aug. 30, 2016 Charlene was born the second daughter of Charles Ernstmeyer and Anne James. The Ernstmeyer family had moved to Portland from Nebraska after the Great War, seeking help at the Shiner's hospital for their daughter Gladys's polio care. When Charlene was only three, the family moved to Cleveland, Ohio, at the height of the Depression. The economic turmoil of the '30's shaped Charlene's life, making her determined to succeed. Leaving her grandmother's family in Ohio, Charlene's parents returned to Portland and settled in the Hollywood district, where she attended and graduated from Grant high school. During the Second Great War, she worked as an engineering aide at the Kaiser shipyards, saving enough money to enter Oregon State College. She later obtained a Master's Degree in Education. While at OSC, she met her lifelong companion and husband, Ross Petrie. They met on a student climbing club ascent of Three Finger Jack and were married in June of 1950. Charlene loved the out doors and they were lifelong members of the Trails Club of Oregon. After the birth of their three children, Blair, Garry and Lesley, she returned to work as a school teacher. After 20 some years, Charlene retired from teaching at Reynolds high school in 1985. In retirement, she had time to follow her love of painting, astrology, bridge, animals and grandchildren. An avid biker and skier, she skied until age 75, was a Timberline hostess and early member of the Mount Hood Ski Patrol. She was a grand master bridge player. Over the years, she traveled extensively, from Kathmandu to Auckland to Machu Picchu and the Shetlands. Charlene's passing is saddening and she will be greatly missed by those who knew her and loved her. Charlene's last rites were respected with her immediate family on the slopes of Mount Hood. The family asks any remembrance be expressed through a contribution to the Oregon Humane Society. - From the Oregonian - Ed.

Trails Club Of Oregon Board Of Trustees
Record of Unconvened Meeting
September 12, 2016

Randy Dietrich, Joel Reitz, and Merrill Hugo were the only board members present. Art Stangell, Counsel, and Phil Crosby, Blazer editor, also attended.

Ann Steinle a long time member from California was introduced.

Tom Shandley, Kelly Marlin, George Milne, Sylvia Milne, Raya Budrevich and Susan Keller also attended.

The group found the August minutes acceptable.

Glen Conrad reported on the August work trip at Nesika. Doug Attebury and his sons Derek and Justin worked hard and well for two days to reside the cupola. Doug Gay installed new flashing on the chimney. More than thirty hikers came up on the Sunday membership hike. Glen has moved two pallets of concrete premix into place for the front porch pour. Six of the posts on the women's dorm porch will have to be replaced next year.

Terry Hill, Matthew Rawls, Bill Moon, Andrew Budrevich, Elina Budrevich, Scott Long, David Brownlow, Sharon Jones, and Shannon Vosika have applied for membership.

The three board members present hope the publication of these names in the Blazer will substitute for a first reading.

We intend to vote the following to membership by email: Erik Miller, Marguerite Rogers, Joyce Tolley, Bitsy Broughton, Vickie Palmer, Lorraine Moon, Shannon Walker, and Raisa Budrevich.

Phil Crosby's computer chose his vacation time to also take a vacation so the September Blazer was about a week late.

There will be a Halloween event at Nesika.

Randy introduced a discussion about reverting our structure to a lodges trustee with chairs for each of the lodges. Glen likes our present structure which he feels gives each lodge direct input to the board. Randy thinks that taking care of a lodge is more than enough to ask of a member if board duties are added. Merrill likes the flexibility of having the lodge chair serve an undefined term at the pleasure of the board.

Art would like to introduce Samuel Grosz to the board at the next meeting as an attorney who might be willing to help us.

Respectfully Submitted,
Merrill Hugo

Membership Notes - September 2016
